Papendick Wins Sheriff Race for Nomination

Fitzgerald Vote Carries Every Precinct In County

GREEN CARRIES DISTRICT, was 214 to 36. 3886 TO 1055

Whoever ordered the weather for election day did a perfect job of it. The day was clear and comfortable and not a cloud appeared unless it may have been on the horizon of some of the hopeful candidates. Everyone seemed cheerful and friendly and if there were any unfriendly rivalry, it wasn't generally manifest.

The voters of Grayling were privileged to do their voting in the remodelled engine house at the City Hall, all newly decorated with Masonite and brown paint. But they didn't have any thing on the voters of Grayling township for their newly re-modelled and redecorated Town Hall was equally attractive. Gray with cream color scheme is very attractive and pleasing. And the old wood stove that kept the place heated had been relegated to the town dump and a bran new oil heater keeps the place comfortable during the days when heat is needed.

The polls of the county opened at 7:00 a. m. and closed at 6:00 p, m. The election laws did not provide for the election inspectors of Grayling city to close at the noon hour so that crew had to eat at piecemeal, but we heard very little grumbling.

At times the inspectors were kept busy taking care of the crowd, with only an occasional lull between rushes. Grayling township voted 88 Republican and 41 Democrat ballots; the City of Grayling tallied 520 Republican and 184 Democratic votes.

Many surprises developed. Not so much in the result of the voting as in the size of the majorities. The largest of interest for the county voters was in the election of sheriff. Frank Bennett the present incumbent, was deposed by one of his former deputies-John A. Papendick by a narrow margin of votes-368 to 322. And the race between Alvin LaChappelle and Clarence (Tony) Gross was watched with a lot of interest by the whole county. The lest to make a good sheriff.

latter, however, had a comfort- Again thanking you, I remain, able majority. Both are splendid men and deserve the confidence of the people. LaChappelle proved himself a good sport when he congratulated his opponent and assured his assistance in the general election. By the way, Mr. LaChappelle lost his job, he says, when he entered the Republican campaign. He had charge of checking up of property taxes for several counties and had an office in the court house.

Frank D. Fitzgerald had a walk-away over Harry S. Toy and Roscoe Conklin Fitch for vernor, and, accord ports carried his popularity thru-out the state. And our old friend that I thank the voters of Craw-Loren D. Dickinson, several times ford county for the wonderful former lieutenant governor, "smeared" his galaxy of opponents by a clean sweep here and in

William Green of Hillman quite surprised the voters by the overwhelming victory over William W. Erkfitz of Rogers City. The vote in the district was as fol-

For register of deeds, Ronnov Hanson, the present incumbent had a majority over his opponent Arthur Clough of 212 to 60.

Several votes were cast for Arthur May for register of deeds but he didn't get enough with the name spelled the same way to entitle him to a place on the Republican ticket. Arthur is a sor of the late Frank May and his

Election Notes

There were 520 Republican bal lots cast in Grayling City Prim ary election and 184 Democratic and 88 Republican and 41 Demo cratic in Grayling township.

Forty-nine Républican ballots cast in Lovells and one Democrat ic, and the latter one gave 1 vote for Axel Peterson for Clerk and Ronnow Hanson for Register of Deeds and no other candidates That's being loyal to one's friends.

Grayling city election inspec-tors worked all day and until nearly noon Wednesday morning in order to complete the count and making out reports.

Frederic election inspectors no nly delivered their official elec tion reports to the County Clerk' office Tuesday night, but they brot both ballot boxes as well. Of course they had to take the boxes back to Frederic.

Alvin LaChappelle was the first to congratulate his oppon-ent, Clarence Gross, on his election and assured him that he would help him in the election. Frank Bennett too gave Jack the glad hand just as soon as Papen-dick's election was assured. That's the spirit.

Maurice didn't do so well as a vote-getter but he took his defeat very cheerfully, just as did others. Someone always loses in an election.

The township clerks did a good job delivering the election re-ports Tuesday night. They were anxiously awaited by candidates and other interested persons,

Merchants' Ball Team Closes Season

Grayling Merchants closed the baseball season Sunday in a very appropriate manner, by defeating East Jordan 7 and 6. Batteries for Grayling were Winterlee and Loskos, and Post played at his old favorite position for the firsttime this season, holding down the second sack. Grayling was the first to score, but at one time during the game were behind, when the score stood at East Jordan 6, Grayling 4. However the Merchants rallied, making a score in the 8th inning and two in the ninth to win the game. East Jordan used two pitchers but just couldn't stop the Merchants' onslaught.

Grayling feels pretty good over winning from East Jordan as the East Jordanites were proclaimed champions in a baseball tourna-ment held in their town a couple of weeks ago.

This has been a great season for the local team for out of 17 games played they won 12. They have enjoyed good crowds at home games, and have had a large following of fans who accompanied them for out-of-town games.

For several years "Blackie" Levan has tried to organize a team that would stick together and he succeeded this year. So you have to hand it to "Blackie" for having revived Grayling's favorite old pastime—baseball. Early in the spring he called for volunteers to meet at his Tavern and he organized a team that has gone

Each of the other counties in this State through which this super-highway will pass has been asked to raise the other $500.00 and Crawford county's share is $50.00 of this amount. It is proposed to raise this $50.00 by popular subscription amongst the business men in Grayling and Crawford county.

Another meeting of the Association will be held early in December, at Lexington, Ky,, at which the eighteen Senators of the nine States will be present and it is hoped at that time to complete final details.

This super-highway will be a big thing for Michigan and our county and it will be the means of practically doubling the tour-ist traffic in this county. The highway will extend from the Michigan Soo to Miami, Florida with a branch-off at Atlanta, Georgia, going to New Orleans on the Gulf of Mexico, and it will be a double lane highway with a park-way in the center.

If the business men of this county will contribute from $1.00 to $2.00 each, our share or $50.00 can be raised in short order. Leave your subscriptions at the Avalanche office or forward to R. A. Wright.

Howler Monkey Is Noisy The howler monkey, whose deepthroated voice echoes through the depths of the Panamanian jungles can be heard in the jungle day and night, and many visitors have misroar of lions. voice, like that of the singing toad, is louder from a distance, decreas-ing in volume as one approaches. But even at close range it is un usual when compared with the birdlike notes of whitefaced and other species of monkeys. Even though he is small in comparison to a lion. the mantled howler is the largest and heaviest of all New World monkeys. His fur is unusually beautiful, shading from very dark brown tones to light. He is of a gregarious nature, traveling in troops and swinging through the tree tops.

The Grandfather Clauses

The grandfather clauses were a provision in state constitutions by which a person's right to vote was based on his descent from a voter. Its purpose was to prevent Negroes from taking part in elections. North Carolina, Louisiana, Georgia and Oklahoma had such clauses in their constitutions. In 1914 the United States Supreme court declared the Oklahoma provision in conflict with the Fifteenth amendment. While there was no mention of race, color or previous condition of servitude, the court held the effect was to disfranchise the descendants of former slaves. In the other states the clauses expired of self-limitation. The grandfather clauses usually read, in effect, something like this: 'No persons shall vote in this state He swings by his tail, a characteristic peculiar to New World if he is unable to read and write, unless his father or grandfather was a voter before 1867."

Chimneys should be inspected before the furnace is started in the One inspection method used quite effectively is that of getting a good smoky fire going and then clapping a stopper over the top of the chimney. If there are breaks anywhere in the chimney the smoke will be seen seeping through.

Pewter Once Held Favor, Then Made Into Bullets

Pewter was the product of a time when economic conditions governed actual needs, and neither in com-position nor design was it other than what it was intended to be—an unpretentious household commodity for daily use.

Pewter speaks of the days in our country when history was in the making. We associate with it the stern and vigorous life of the early settlers. Surrounding it is much of pathos and romance, for more than one piece of choice pewter was thrown into the melting pot to make bullets to defend the home established in the new land.

For a period of nearly 100 years preceding the War of the Revolution, notes Alice R. Rollins in the Los Angeles Times, it was practically the only tablewere available. Gradually it had supplanted the wooden ware used during the early years of settlement and in turn gave way to the china and silver of more prosperous times.

Although much of the pewter used in the earlier part of the colonial period was brought from England, a great deal of it was made by craftsmen of the colonies.

Almost every community had its pewterers. Little skill was required to produce plates, basins, mugs and the like as they required only cast ing, finishing on a lathe and a little soldering or welding.

Many of the designs were copied from the English pieces which were shipped to the colonies, but on the whole the American pewterers confined themselves to making plain and practical pieces of their own designing.

Cats as Large as Lions Lived in Maryland Cave

Monster cats, as big as lions or tigers and probably just as fierce, were the terrors of western Maryland about a million years ago. Bones of these creatures, together with those of 46 other animals who lived near the city of Cumberland at some interval early in the last Ice age, have been described by Smithsonian Institution paleontol ogist.

These bones were gathered from limestone cavern, opened when a railroad cut was being constructed. and represent a strange assortment of creatures ranging from mastodon to crocodile.

The presumption is that in Ice age days the cavern was a natural trap with an opening directly on top through which the animals fell Once inside, there was no way to get out.

It was a curious assemblage of northern and southern animals. Bones of wolverines and martens, types now found only in the far northern woods, are mingled with those of tapirs, which now range no farther north than Central America.

This can only mean, the Smithwere assembled only over a very considerable period, possibly several thousand years, during which there was a notable change in the climate. The Ice age extended over approximately two million years. But during this time there several retreats and advances of the glaciers with intervals of relatively warm climate.

Dwarfing Horticultural Process

Dwarfing is a horticultural proc ess, requiring not only skill and knowledge of plants, but great pa-tience. The tree selected in either a specimen dwarfed by nature or a tiny seedling. By training, tying, pruning and grafting, the specimens are shaped and kept in miniature which the Japanese call "bon-sai." are not only curiosities. They are replicas of ancient trees on a tiny scale. Their wind-blown tops, projecting roots, and graceful spreading branches exactly reproduce the effect of forest giants. Maples, bamboos, cherries, pines, hollies, oaks, azaleas, junipers, and other evergreens are employed. They remain in the open air, most of the year. In everything but size and hardiness, these tiny trees resemble a forest of century old specimens developed by nature, instead of by

Bloodhounds Have Been Known as 'St. Huberts'

Bloodhounds, larger of the hound breeds, are deceiving in their facial expression. With wrinkles creasing their faces, these dogs are probably the most disconsolate looking ones in the ever-growing canine family. In reality, the bloodhound is a hapdispositioned dog, ever friendly and always willing to please the

Because of their remarkable scenting ability, bloodhounds have been used for many decades to track down criminals. However this was not always the chief purpose of the dog, writes George Butz in the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Centuries ago the bloodhound was known as a "St. Hubert hound," and was probably one of the first pure-bred dogs of all time. They were carefully bred by the monks at St. Hubert's abbey in France. In those days the dogs were adept in

The nobility of France were ex remely careful in breeding bloodhounds and their ancient history discloses the fact quite a number of them were pure white. Later they were white streaked on a background of black and tan.

Gradually, as they were imported to England, bloodhounds were banned that had any white in their coat colors. According to the present standard, tan with black saddle is desired in coat markings.

Bloodhounds are not necessarily huge, clumsy dogs. They weigh from 80 to 100 pounds, but are unexpectedly fast when they get under way. They naturally trail with their nose close to the earth and that alone impedes their speed. Out in the open these dogs show amazing celerity of foot.

Old New York Furniture

Largely Dutch in Origin The Hollanders who settled Nieu Amsterdam and the surrounding territory were ill pleased when it became a British colonial nossession and was renamed New York, says The American Collector. For more than 100 years afterward Dutch settlers and their descend-ants kept to themselves and had as little as possible to do with the English arrivals. Legally they might be British subjects, but in speech, religious observance and domestic manners they remained lieges of the Netherlands.

This tenacity explains why so much New York furniture adhered in style and type to that of the Low countries until well into the Eighteenth century, when some English furniture forms finally gained acceptance. But even then, judging by the number that survived one piece of Dutch furniture continued to be popular with those of Holland descent. This was the cas. Large and ample, it was a practical piece that lent itself to nany uses. If shelves were fitted behind the double doors it became an excellent linen press.

But in spite of its convenience it found no favor with English cabinet makers. Consequently the kas can always be ascribed to Dutch workmanship for a Dutch household.

"Beanborough seems to be greatly oothered with indigestion."

"I should say so! He refused to attend a moving picture show the other night because one of the scenes had a banquet in it."

The sea otter, his silky, soft dense nelt the most valuable known to commerce, was responsible for the exploration and early development of that part of the North American continent now known as Alaska. For on the throne of Russia sat a pretty, capricious lady who would and must have sea otter skins, as she found them most becoming. Her Imperial Majesty Catherine II, empress of Russia, said "bring me furs." and furs were brought, not only to Catherine the Great, and her court, but to the markets of Asia, recalls a writer in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. During the closing years of the Eighteenth century and the opening decade of the Nineteenth, it is estimated that from 8.000 to 10.000 sea otter skins were taken to Asia each year from the southern waters of Alaska.

It was Peter the Great and his empress, Catherine I, who first took real interest in discovering more about the great land, vaguely reported to lie to the eastward. Under their command, Vitus Bering, Danish captain in the Russian service in 1728 discovered and named St Lawrence island, sailed through Bering strait, and rounded East Thus Bering strait was on the world's map 15 years before the first white man gazed upon the Rocky mountains. On a second voy age of exploration, Bering, in 1741, made the actual discovery of main-land Alaska, landing near Prince William sound. Bering died in the new country he had discovered, and after months of suffering and pri-vation some of his men returned home bearing the first of those history-making sea ofter skins, which they sold for nearly $30,000. As this news spread among the fur hunters of Siberia it caused an excitement second only to the frantic rush for gold that more than a century and a half later was to draw thousands to the mines of the Klondike.

Cloth Names Are Traced To Some Other Countries

Many of our names for cloth come o us from the Orient. Calico is from Calicut, India, the city from which it was first imported. Doubtless at first the term used was Calicut cloth, but phrases often shrink in usage, and calico was an easy evolution, says the Kansas City Star. Madras, also in India, gave us the cloth which bears its name This was first made from silk and cotton, but the name is applied to he same weave in cotton also, a fabric which is much used for men's Damask is from Damascus, noted long ago for its fine steel blades and for its silks. Damask is characterized by woven designs which represent flowers or conventional figures. It was originally made of silk, but the name was later applied to the same weave in silk, cotton, rayon or wool used for hangings and upholsteries, and to linen woven for table napery and towels.

Linsey-woolsey is an old English name from linsel, linen and wolsye, wool. Many woolen fabrics bear English names, such as melton, from a town of that name in Leicestershire and worsted, from a town in Norfolk

Meaning of Bed Herring Across Path

A red herring is a herring of special grade which has been heavily salted and slowly smoked to give it a rich brown or reddish color. "To draw a red herring across one's path, track or trail," means to attempt to divert one's attention from the real question by raising a side issue. The saying originated among sportsmen and was suggested by an old practice described as follows in "Gentlemen's Recreation" which was written by a man named Cox and published in 1686: "The trailing or dragging of a dead cat, or fox and in case of necessity a red-herring) three or four miles . . . and then laying the dogs on the scent." Dogs have a keen scent for red herring, and if one is drawn across the trail of a fox it will mislead the hounds.

Brown's attitude is that of most old-line Democrats in Mich igan who sympathize generally with FDR's program, but balk at some of his far-reaching reforms. Along with Brown, you will find Edward Fry, state chairman, and his brother, Theodore, state treasurer. This viewpoint is shared by Van Wagoner and Nowicki; nationally, it is held by such men as Vice-President Gar ner, Carter Glass and other life long Democrats who yote straight and abhor the very existence of

Independence

In somewhat of the spirit of a declaration of independence State Chairman Fry greeted James A. Farley, national chairman, at Mackinac Island, with these significant words:

"Mr. Farley, Michigan is still we find their strength to be some- been done in Washington or in what as follows:

Governor Murphy certainly has siderably higher than investment reset a shining example of how a state governor can co-operate 100 per cent with the President. Except for the possibility of an out-and-out Democratic split, Michigan Republicans face an uphill fight.

To the Caucasus Region In a limited sense the term Caucasian refers to the Caucasus region, on the borderland of Europe and Asia, or to its inhabitants, especially its indigenous people, notes a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Term Caucasian Refers

In its wider use the term is employed as the German anthropologist Johann Friedrich Blumenbach used it, in 1775, to designate the division of mankind which embraces the chief races inhabiting Europe, North Africa and south-western Asia. He applied this name on the supposition that the people of the Caucasus were the archetype of the race. The typical people of the Caucasic family are comprised in the speakers of the Indo-European, Semitic and Hamitic languages, although some other races, such as the Ainus of Japan and the Polynesians, are by some considered to be stray Caucasians.

Blumenbach distinguished five primary races of mankind—the Caucasic (which includes some people as brown or black as those of other races), the Mongolic, the Ethiopic, the American, and the Malay. This classification is still largely followed, although some, like Linnaeus, allow only four—European, Asiatic, African and American—and others, like DeQuatrefages, reduce the number to three, the Malay and American Indian being treated as mixed races, chiefly Mongolic in origin.

First Church in Canada

Is Claimed by Tadoussac Colorful gentlemen of the Cross and the sword march across the pages of Canadian history. Their color and pageantry have perhaps beclouded a more significant phase of their presence. The prossic fact is that the first civilized community in Canada was established because the profit margin in furs was conturns from whale oil, according to a correspondent in the Boston Globe.

Enterprising European seamen discovered the money-making possiwhales up the St. Lawrence as far as Tadoussac, where the Saguenay jective. In other words, he is sometimes the reformer gets of the first church in Canada.

The Indians objected to the newcomers, massacred them and wiped out the settlement, but they left the church standing and the visitor to Tadoussac can hear the angelus rung by the same bell in the same church that survived the destruc-tion of the early village.

Visitors to Tadoussac discover, among other things, that whaling is an industry at the mouth of the Saguenay, where whaling fleets hunt white whales and the larger oceangoing variety.

How Chinese Gather Persimmons Few customs of Chinese life offer more humor than the practice of picking persimmons, says the National Geographic Magazine. In tertain localities pickers work in pairs. One climbs into the tree branches, gripping a short pole on the end of which is fastened an iron hook. By placing the hook over the fruiting branch and giving it a quick twist, the picker can detach the persimmon. The picker's partner below, head back, watches every movement. Imagine a Chinese, wearing two long, shirtlike coats (three if the weather happens to be chilly) grasping two short sticks which support an improvised net of cloth or sacking. His task is to rush forward to catch a falling persimmon. The picker in the tree does not always wait for his partner to get into position. The persimmon falls; the partner lunges.

Carnegle's Theory of Wealth Andrew Carnegle's theory of wealth was as follows: "This, then, is held to be the duty of the man of wealth: To set an example of modest, unostentatious living, shunning display and extravagance: to provide moderately for the wants of those dependent upon him, and after doing so, to consider all surplus revenues which come to him simply as trust funds, which he is called upon to administer . . . the man of wealth thus becoming the mere trustee and agent for his poorer brethren."

World's Longest Mustache John Kontra, eighty-one years old, a swineherd, astonished Budapest, Hungary, with the length of his mustache when he visited the capital. He claims to have the world's longest mustache. It measures 28 inches. He oils his mustache twice every day and sleeps with it wound round a ramshorn to keep it curled. Records have been looked up and it has been found that the only authentic claim of the kind was put forward by General Nagaoka of Japan who died in 1933. His mustache measured 20 inches.

Fire Chief Uses Amplifier High in the air on ladders, their vision obscured by smoke, Chicago's firemen yet speed unerringly to each new outcropping of flame and quench it before it gets out of hand. For on the ground, with an unobstructed view of the entire confiagration and adjacent property, is the fire marshal directing his men by means of a 100-watt sound amplifier, capable of carrying his voice more than a mile.—Radio Retailing.

WHAT PRICE FISH ARE PAY-ING FOR EMPTY POCKETS (Contributed)

Now, nobody can object to fellow having a vacation and go-ing fishing. Lots of Presidents have done it before. But tastes are changing. The modern angler is doing things on a scale that would make Izaak Walton's eyes pop out like a pair of salmon eggs.

The fishing barge on the latest presidential expedition is a 10,-000-ton cruiser that cost $20,000,-000. The "attendants" are 700 officers and men. Going along as tender is a $5,000,000 destroyer with 200 more.

The $20,000,000 barge was in the navy yard for weeks before the trip being fixed up to suit a fisherman's taste. Rooms were e-arranged, new carpets were laid, baths were put in, special compartments were built for fishing tackle. It was a job that, from a cost standpoint, would have given the richest king or maharajah a sinking spell. But it was all a part of the grand scale of living—and fishing—in

Maybe the Forgotten Man, wading out in some creek with a six-bit pole and a balky secondhand reel trying to snag an eightinch trout that probably isn't Mrs. there, can get some comfort out of thinking of the $20,000,000 fishing expedition. After all, he's
